THIS YEAR IT'S A DOUBLE FEAST

CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES TO LAST OVER MONDAY.

PHASES OF CELEBRATION

Chicago Business Concerns to Give Over a Million Dollars to Employees—John D. As Santa Claus.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, Dec. 24.—New York is to have a double Christmas this year. It will begin tomorrow and continue over Monday. It's to be a charitable Christmas, too, for on both days institutions and individuals are going deep down into their pockets to dispense Christmas cheer to the homeless and the hungry and the ill-provided, with even a more lavish hand than has been seen in former years. Churches of all denominations will distribute well-filled baskets, the Salvation Army and kindred organizations will feed the drolly at great feasts spread in public halls, several free dinners will be given especially for the newsboys, and in all the hospitals, the prisons and the charitable institutions of the city preparations have been made for bounteous Christmas dinners.

Christmas at White House.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 24.—With all the members of the President's family at home for the holidays, it promises to be a very merry Christmas indeed at the White House. A number of intimate friends, including several young people, have been invited to help in making the day one of mirth and jollity. The day will bring many happy surprises to the various members of the Taff household, to judge from the almost continuous stream of express wagons and delivery boys that have been leaving parcels and packages at the executive mansion for several days past.

And Sunday School.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Dec. 24.—The most envied of all—the little girls and boys of Tarrytown today are those whose names are enrolled as members of the Sunday school of the First Baptist church. The church is the one that John D. Rockefeller and his family attend during their residence in Tarrytown and the word has gone forth that the oil magnate will remember all the Sabbath school pupils with Christmas stockings filled with goodies, which he believes will be more acceptable, if not more beneficial, than the customary gifts of copies of "Pilgrim's Progress."

The cash gifts distributed among the thousands of employees of the International Harvester company amounted to $500,000, while the appropriation of Armour and Company for the same purpose amounted to about $300,000. The large department stores, the banks and board of trade firms were also liberal in their gifts to their employees this year.

This was too plain talk for Chairman Rogers. He did not answer directly at all but plunged off into a complicated discussion of the educational merits and demerits of the book. Other delegates asked the Boy Scouts question later on but with as little success as Cotton had met with. Nor did they succeed in getting the book accepted. It remains on the Council's black-list and will probably remain there indefinitely.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

I.

A child looks out on the snowclad world.

As he hears the Christmas bells,

And a song of hope in his breast's unfurled.

At the message their beauty tells:

Some day he'll be grown into manhood strong.

With honor and wealth and name,

And the years between stretch far and long.

Ere he climbs to the tow'r of fame,

But tonight—ah he's only a boy to-night.

And soon by the fire place there

His stocking will hang in the fitful light.

Well filled with his ample share,

And gloo parts the lips of the fair-haired boy.

While his heart beats high with his childlike joy;

For the task of hanging his stocking thorn.

At the chimney place is his only care,

Oh, what to a child is the fear of life!

When radiant faces and dreams are rife;

In his broad, where only a great hope dwells;

Ah, sweet to him are the Christmas bells.

II.

A maiden lists to the Christmas bells,

All glad in her fair youth's prime;

At the sound of their ringing her bosom swells.

For life like a golden chime,

And she pictures a scene that is won-drous fair.

As the melody peals and thrills,

And starts out on the chill crisp air

The song they sing is her bridal song;

How the melody throbs and rolls

While each note speaks with a sweet tone, long,

Of the mating of loving souls.

For last night he in the parlor dim

Had whispered a question low,

And now on her finger a gift from him

Sparkles bright in the twilight's glow.

There's a golden haze o'er the dull gray skies,

There's a rosy mist in the gleams

Of the embers bright, and her languid eyes

Are heavy with pained dreams,

And a sweet desire in her bosom swells.

As she shucks to the song of the Christmas bells.

III.

A gray-haired mother hears the roll

And the surge of the Christmas bells,

And every note is a sobbing toll

Every peal is a sighing knell,

For her boy was here but a year ago,

The star of her wintry sky;

But now he is silent beneath the snow

And over she questions—“Why?

Oh, the Christmas strain brings him back again

With his smile and his merry face,

As in old days, with his youthful ways,

His strength and his youthful grace,

Now the bells seem saying, “Oh, wait—oh, wait!

He will meet you there at the gate

—the gate,

He will call you ‘Mother’ and clasp your hand,

And the reason, then, you will understand.”

But a numbing pain in her poor heart swells

As she lists to the song of the Christmas bells.

IV.

There is one who looks with a hunted glance,

From the gloom of his narrow cell,

And the peal of the Christmas bells enhances

His woe with the tale they tell.

The picture they bring is the woman fair

Who lured him into this dark despair.

His head bends low on his trembling knees,

He stole for that woman her whims to please;

Now his rival sits by her side tonight,

And kisses her lips with a fierce delight,

And she smiles at him with that smile so rare,

And playfully ruffles his wavy hair.

The convict's eyes seem to bulge and gloat.

And the cords stand out on his gasping throat.

And his fingers clench and open again,

While his strong breast heaves with an anguished pain,

And his heart beats mad with a lust to kill.

As he hisses her name with a murderous thrill,

For why can they revel in Christmas cheer?

When he is entombed in this death-cell here,

Oh, Christmas bells with your tuneful swell.

There is tragedy here in the tale you tell.

V.

Oh beautiful bells of the Christmas time,

How you brighten some lives with your rhythmic chime;

For some you sing tragedy, sorrow and fear;

For others sweet hope and a crown of cheer;

But for all there's a message of love entwined,

Of the One who died for the world, —of old;

There is hope in the story your pealing tells,

So ring, ring on, oh ye Christmas bells.

This little poem, “The Message of the Bells,” is from the pen of Maurine Hathaway, “The Poetess of the Pines,” and copyrighted by the Geo. W. Parker Art Co., of Minneapolis.

It was written within the last ten days, and appears for the first time in type today. The author, as well as the choice sentiment expressed, is entitled to more than passing notice.

Mrs. Hathaway went with her husband to the north woods of Minnesota, near the Canadian border, some years ago. She was alone much of the time, and very lonely, and while she knew nothing of poetry, she commenced to write for her own amusement, little thinking that her work would ever attract attention.

Visiting her old home at Minneapolis, some time since, she was induced to show some of her work to Mr. Thompson, the art publisher, and he was so much impressed with its merits that he offered to publish a booklet of lyrics. The result is that “Eldors,” by Maurine Hathaway, has just been issued, and the “Poetess of the Pines,” from her little home in the north woods, writes on.

The sentiment in the Christmas poem touches the roadway of life at every point from childhood to the end of the journey. It recognizes in the child, faith in the jolly old patron saint who contributes so freely to joy and happiness at Christmas time.

To the maiden, the sweet-toned bells chant a message of love and bright anticipation, born of a presence and a promise which means a home all her own, and the melody breathes a spirit of sweet content.

To the “gray-haired mother,” whose life is in the shadow, because of the tragedy which crossed the pathway the bells contain a significant tone of sadness, and to the man who looks out from his narrow cell, with life embittered, the tone is discordant and comes to him as a mockery.

Thus it has ever been, and thus it will ever be, as the generations come and go. The drama of life is a continuous vaudeville where comedy and tragedy compete for laurels, and the stage setting is never so pronounced as at Christmas time.

The brave dreamer who lost their lives in Chicago, a day or two ago, were planning for a merry Christmas with loved ones. The gifts were all bought and one of those number was to act as Santa Claus for the children, but it was not to be, for instead of joy his come a great sorrow.

OTTO SCHICKER FILES DOCUMENT AGAINST INTERURBAN COMPANY WITH RAIL-ROAD COMMISSION.

WANTS THE FARE REDUCED

From City Limits to the New Railroad Yards, Claims Beloit Has Been Granted Similar Reduction.

Otto Schicker has filed with the state Railroad Commission a complaint against the Rockford Interurban Company in which he asks for a reduction of the present tariff of ten cents from the city of Janesville to the new Northwestern railroad yards, a distance of 80 rods outside the city limits. In his complaint he alleges that the defendant company has made a similar rate for an equal distance from Beloit to the Beloit Country Club and asks the commission to investigate the discrimination against Janesville.

The matter is one of much interest to all who have occasion to use the interurban from the city to South Janesville and now have to pay a ten cent fare. If Mr. Schicker is successful in his endeavor to make the company reduce its fare it would be but two cents as he claims it is in Beloit. His complaint follows:

COMPLAINT AGAINST CARRIER RAILROAD COMMISSION OF WISCONSIN.

Otto Schicker against The Rockford & Interurban Railway Company. The partition of the above named Otto Schicker respectively shows:

1. That he is resident of the city of Janesville, Rock County, Wisconsin, and Chairman of B. of L. E.

2. That the above named Railway Company is a common carrier engaged in the transportation of persons and property by railroad between points in the State of Wisconsin, and that as such common carrier, said Railway Company is subject to the provisions of Chapter 87, of the Wisconsin Statutes of 1888, and acts amendatory thereto, and is likewise subject to the provisions of Chapter 362, of the Laws of Wisconsin for the year 1905, and acts amendatory thereto.

3. That the line of said railway company extends from the city of Janesville, Rock County, Wisconsin, in a southerly direction into and through the city of Beloit, Rock County, Wisconsin, and on into the state of Illinois.

That said Railway Company operates its cars over said line through and between said points for the purpose of carrying passengers, baggage, express and light or parcel freight.

4. That said railway company charges, collects and receives ten cents for one continuous passenger from said city of Janesville to the C. & N. W. Ry. Company yards known as South Janesville, being a distance of about 80 rods outside the city limits of said city of Janesville.

That said railway company charges, collects and receives five cents for one continuous passenger from said city of Beloit to the Beloit Country Club, being a distance of about 80 rods outside the city limits of said city of Beloit.

5. That said charge for one continuous passage of ten cents made by said railway company from said city of Janesville to said place known as C. & N. W. Ry. yards, is unjust, exorbitant and discriminatory for the reason that said company transports passengers an equal distance outside of the city of Beloit for which a charge of only five cents is made.

Therefore, petitioner prays that said railway company be required to answer to the charges herein and that after due hearing and investigation an order be made commanding said railway company to cease and desist from said violations of the acts referred to in said petition, and for such other and further order as the Commission may deem necessary and just in the premises.

Christmas Holiday Will Be Observed Following the Usual Custom of Past Years.

While December 25th, Christmas day, comes on Sunday this year, the following day, Monday, will be officially observed as a holiday. Following the usual custom the Gazette will not be published on that day, nor on January 2, the week following, which is the legal holiday for the observance of New Years.

On December 21st the Annual Review of the past year's work in Janesville, which includes a chronological history of the year, the new buildings with many cuts of new homes and buildings erected, a list of the deaths, births, fires and other happenings that go to make up the history of Janesville will be issued. As much care has been taken to make this accurate the edition will serve as a valuable memento of Janesville.

FOUND THEATRE EXITS BLOCKED

Chief Klein's Tour of Inspection of Nickelodeons Yesterday Afternoon May Lead to Prosecutions.

Fire Chief Klein made a little tour of investigation of the moving-picture theatres yesterday afternoon. He found the side exit locked at James Zanias' establishment, formerly the Nickelodeon, at 3:45 o'clock and at the Majestic, managed by Nicholas Pappas, all of the exits and one door of the front entrance were locked at 3:50 o'clock. Moreover, in the rear of the Majestic there is a cellar door of film construction over which patrons would have to pass to reach the alleyway and in the opinion of the chief it would go down under any considerable number of people getting away from the exit in a hurry.

This morning City Attorney H. L. Maxfield's attention was called to the circumstances and the further fact that it was a second offence in both instances, both parties having allowed their exits to be blocked on a former occasions and allowed to escape with merely a warning. The city attorney took the matter up and stated that in his opinion the city ordinance under which such matters would come had not been properly passed.

The chief will now endeavor to bring about a prosecution under the state laws.

"Say, where did you fellows get that picture of the training ship in Norway?" said a young man who put his face close to the grating of the Garrison Theatre (Philadelphia) ticket window and looked seriously at the treasurer while the audience of Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival was passing out through the lobby. "I've been on that ship, not a year ago, too, and I know most of the boys on that ship better than I know anybody around here. That picture was certainly a surprise to me. It must have been taken very soon after I left Norway." It developed that the youngster is an American but has spent several years in the training service abroad. The pictures show hundreds of boys at drill including many humorous post-

This particular picture appealed to him because he "had been there." To those who have not, it will awaken a new conception of the embryo sailor's life. This incident shows the value of Lyman H. Howe's attraction to the stay-at-home as well as those who travel much. It is educational without any of the terrors implied by that grave adjective. For it provides topics for conversation. It stimulates reminiscences from those who have traveled much and awakens many happy memories of scenes visited. In many pictures you will see much more than you could actually see by travel. For instance, if you went to London, to witness the King's funeral, it would be simply impossible for you to see all that Mr. Howe shows of it, as his scenes represent the views of a

Davis went direct to Clleango when he left Boston. There he wrote a letter to an uncle in Mexico. That letter was returned to his former business associate, Ralph B. Dudley. Immediately after writing the letter Davis went to Denver and later to the ranch of his uncle. It is said that Davis is practically penniless.

BINDON'S CURE

In view of the many fatal illnesses which Robert Bindon had enjoyed it was remarkable that he was still alive and well. No one ever would have suspected him of being a weakling. Bindon was thirty-six, over six feet tall and broad correspondingly, and ate three good meals each day. Further, he did enough work for ten ordinary men, yet every summer, when he had a breathing space, he always ran across to Europe and immediately approached death's door.

The attack always hit him when he reached Sonderbad, which was noted for its medicinal springs. Of course, an easy solution of the difficulty would seem to be staying away from Sonderbad, but he had got into the habit of going there. Especially did he depend on Dr. Jana, who always attended him and with great difficulty dragged him back from dissolution. Bindon thought Dr. Jana one of the wonders of the human race and often talked about him to Juanita Drane before they were married.

Juanita was one of those ethereal, fragile-looking creatures who always run things to suit themselves without any one's suspecting how in creation they do it. Apparently she was a clinging vine and a bundle of nerves, and she sympathized sweetly with Bindon when he mourned over his suffering and sighed because illness wasted so much time for him.

"It's dreadful to be so afflicted," he told her, "but it can't be helped."

Juanita said that she supposed it couldn't.

Bindon and she had been married several months when they went to Europe. There Bindon enjoyed her pleasure in the sights, new to her, though old to him. Like a boy let out of school, he joyously conducted the trip. Naturally, therefore, his wife was alarmed one day to see him holding his head and looking serious.

"Don't worry, love," he told her solemnly, "but I fear I am going to have an attack of something. I can feel it coming on!"

Just as Juanita's heart stopped beating in dread she recalled something that sent the blood back to her cheeks—she remembered that the train was approaching Sonderbad and she also remembered a vow which she had privately made back in the days before she married Bindon.

She did not go into hysterics, as he had half expected she would, but merely said she must get to the hotel as soon as possible and lie down. Then when he faintly requested her to make haste if she would save his life, she said for Dr. Jana. Leaving Bindon a beautifully patient sufferer, Juanita hastened down stairs and lay in wait for her husband's physician. There was a light in her blue eyes that spoke determination.

Dr. Jana was charmed to meet the wife of his distinguished patient, but he said he must hasten to the sufferer. Then to his amazement he found himself dragged by a small white hand into a secluded corner, while a remarkably pretty face bent close to his whiskered one. Juanita concentrated all her nervous force on her hypnotic gaze and her German verbs.

"See here, Dr. Jana," she said in a sudden clear new tone that held the famous doctor in instant attention. "Before you go upstairs to Robert I want to tell you what you are to say. He isn't sick—not a bit! There isn't a thing the matter with him! He's just full of imagination and he's got the habit of coming over to Sonderbad every year and trying to die, and I won't have it! His state of mind is a nuisance, because it spoils our trip! I want you to go and tell him that he is well and that nothing is wrong—do you understand?"

There are some things that even an autocratic physician can't manage, and Dr. Jana recognized that Juanita was one of them. Still hypnotized, he felt himself going upstairs to the invalid.

"Not!" he said, gruffly, "you are not going blind! Those shooting pains come from smoking! Stop cigars for a couple of days and your eyes will be all right!"

The patient described some more symptoms.

"Not!" barked Dr. Jana. "You haven't got cancer of the stomach! It's indigestion from overloading it!"

A little later he roared: "No, it isn't paralysis in your leg—you've just cramped a muscle from lying in bed! There isn't a thing the matter with you, Herr Bindon!"

"Isn't it lovely!" Juanita cooed when the great Dr. Jana had left and she was throwing up the window shades and removing the glasses and spoons that Bindon had already ordered set out for his medicines. "Dr. Jana says you're all right! I'm so relieved! And we can go on to Vienna tomorrow, can't we, dear?"

"If I'm well enough," said her husband, severally.

"Why, aren't you going to get up now?" demanded his wife in a surprised tone. "I want to walk through the town, and today's our only chance!"

"Juanita," said Bindon in a hurt voice, as he clambered out of bed, "if I do it's your fault, but I'll sacrifice myself and go! I think Dr. Jana is getting old—it's quite apparent that he isn't as good as he used to be!"

That was the end of Bindon's series of fatal illnesses at Sonderbad.

Home Course In Health Culture

XVIII.—Long Life In the Home

By EUGENE L. FISK, M. D.
Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Our care should not be so much to live long as to live well—Heneca.

A WISE man said: "There appears to exist a greater desire to live long than to live well." Measure, by man's desires, he cannot live long enough; measure by his good deeds, and he has not lived long enough; measure by his evil deeds, and he has lived too long."

More length of days as measured by the calendar is but a poor thing to write about. The "filling" that goes into those days is the real measure of life.

To encourage a solid and punctilious regard for the attainment of a phenomenal span of life is not in keeping with the higher ideal of philosophy or science.

Life is a Trust Fund.

In considering this problem we should bear in mind, however, that life is something that we hold in trust. At least that is the lesson of the best thought that has come to us through the ages. We have no right to handle this trust fund with careless spendthrift indifference; neither may we hoard it with such miserly care that it shall earn no interest in good deeds and human achievement. Society condemns the scrofulous in the same degree that it lauds the patriot or the hero who gives up his life in a good cause.

But some people lack a sense of proportion. The degree of their avarice is out of all proportion to the cause in which it is offered up and the possible evasion of higher responsibility, and the reflex injury to others is often unrelieved.

Barring the emergencies of war and accident, there are few circumstances that warrant the deliberate forfeiture of life or persistent neglect of health.

It is better that the worker, whether humble breadwinner or lofty statesman, should be spared to work long and under proper restraint and pose than that his life should be burned up prematurely in feverish and often misdirected effort.

The first step, therefore, in planning for long life in the higher meaning of the term is to acquire a sense of proportion.

What is Old Age?

Cazals said, "A man is as old as his arteries." True enough, but far from being a definition of old age. To define old age we must first define life.

Herbert Spencer tried to define life and succeeded admirably in some respects, but there is nothing in his definition that explains why the human clock runs down in less than a century instead of running for several centuries.

Preparing For Old Age.

Preparation should begin in youth. One original observer, Charles Sedgwick Miles, has advanced the seeming paradox that we grow old faster in infancy than in old age; that cell change is far slower in the sixtieth decade of life than in the first six months of babyhood. In a certain physiological sense this is true.

The hardened arteries at forty may be the result of poor feeding, lack of physical training, improper breathing habits and deficient oxygenation during childhood. Give the child a fair start in the race. This is far better than to devise drugs and potions for the relief of the maladies of maturity and old age.

The Effects of Life Strain.

It is true that long life is often a matter of the quality of one's "living." The diseases that are responsible for the larger part of the death rate after middle life are of the degenerative class, involving the heart, blood vessels and kidneys. Indeed, where one of the conditions exists the others usually are present to a greater or lesser degree.

These conditions may be due to nervous strain affecting the heart and arteries or to the circulation in the blood of poisonous principles, the products of indigestion and insufficient combustion. In fact, these troubles are usually the result of intemperance in eating, drinking, working or playing.

Degenerative Diseases.

A most commendable and enthusiastic campaign is being waged against tuberculosis and other infectious diseases, but deaths from heart disease, kidney trouble, paralysis, etc., excite no comment and are taken as a matter of course. The death rate from tuberculosis has been reduced about 50 per cent in the past thirty years, while during that same period the death rate in the United States registration area from diseases of heart, blood vessels and kidneys has increased 105 per cent.

This is a nut to crack for well meaning people who shut their eyes to all that is unpleasant and shudder in our civilization and hug the thought that the world is necessarily growing better every day.

The mean duration of life has undoubtedly greatly increased in the past century, but the increase is due to the lowering of the death rate among young people. After middle life there has been a decided increase in the death rate. At least the evidence available in this country warrants this belief. No such increase is shown by British statistics until the age of sixty-five is reached.

The "high cost of living" may be a factor in that the struggle for existence is harder and involves more strain. I am inclined to the belief, however, that too much prosperity is a much more potent cause of the high mortality at the advanced ages.

The amount of food that is wasted in the average American family is appalling, and this surplus of nutrition, combined with the strenuous life and intemperate habits fostered by our rapidly developing and complex civilization, may well account for the remarkable increase in the mortality from degenerative diseases.

Principles of Prevention.

As I have already suggested, a good start in childhood frees a man against these degenerative affections. But the strongest constitution in maturity may yield to abuse, and the time is coming when the man who throws away the splendid asset of sound health will be looked upon as a social enemy. Since the degenerative affections that lead to premature old age are the result of intemperance, using the term in its broadest sense, temperance, also used in its widest significance, is the keynote of prevention.

Importance of Exercise.

As middle life approaches and there is a slowing down of the vital activities a disinclination for exercise often develops. This is to a certain extent normal. The man of forty who attempts to keep up with football, baseball or even tennis is taking heavy chances. The strain on heart and arteries may lead to chronic changes more than counterbalancing the benefit from exercise. But with the abandonment of active sports and with neglect to exercise there is often an increase in the amount of food and stimulants taken, and with increasing business care or social activities the "furnace becomes clogged."

It is important, therefore, to preserve a proper balance in these things. Slow down in the matter of strenuous competitive exercise, but get enough exercise to burn up your food and prevent the accumulation of fat and food poisons.

Slow down in the matter of diet and do not let the pleasures of the table tempt you to gradually increased indulgence in rich food as the more active pleasures of life are relinquished. Golf, billiards, bill climbing, hunting, fishing are all beneficial forms of exercise which may be indulged far into old age.

man, should be spared to work long and under proper restraint and pose than that his life should be burned up prematurely in feverish and often misdirected effort.

The first step, therefore, in planning for long life in the higher meaning of the term is to acquire a sense of proportion.

On Ridicule.

Or this we may be sure, that ridicule fastens on the vulnerable points of a cause, and finds out the weak side of an argument, if those who resort to it sometimes rely too much on its success, those who are chiefly annoyed by it almost always are so with reason, and cannot be too much on their guard against deserving it.—William Thalbitz.

Russian Footwear.

All Russians have a weakness for handsome footwear and the result is that there are more pairs of showy boots worn in the czar's empire than anywhere else on earth. This preference extends to the women as well as to the men.

How to String Beads.

In stringing any precious beads, and pearls especially, never use a needle. Simply wax the end of the silk and pass it through the hole. The knotting is also an important point. It must be large enough to hold the bead, but not large enough to show. Pearl stringers use an intricate knot of their own, and that is why it is, on the whole, better to have very expensive jewels strung by a professional. When there is a collar or something of the sort to be made, this is absolutely necessary.

Hard to Be Evil.

It is after all, no difficult to be good. The real hardships are in evil.—Baron.

A 'Polish Funeral.
The above describes the pomp of weddings and funerals. At the funeral of a prince-three cavaliers entered the church on horseback. One carried the deceased's saber, another his javelin, the third his lance. Riding at full speed, they broke their weapons against the sides of the bier. The last rider then let himself fall from his horse, as if he were dead. Priests seized the horse and he was obliged to redeem it. Money was thrown to the ground. Confusion reigned; in the scrabbled bishops, priests and noblemen were thrown to the ground. At the end of the ceremony the ecclesiastics had a great feast, at which Hungarian wine flowed copiously.—George A. Dorsey in the Chicago Tribune.

SULTAN'S CHIEF ADVISOR VISITS NEW YORK.

R. D. Buckman, once a sailor on the Great Lakes and now chief advisor to the Sultan of Turkey,

New York, N. Y.—From cabin boy on a Great Lakes schooner to chief advisor to the Sultan of Turkey at the age of 41 is the remarkable career of R. D. Buckman, who has just returned to America for vacation.

At the age of 14 Mr. Buckman began his career as a sailor on the Great Lakes and had traveled the world over. His introduction to the Sultan of Turkey came through his being in command of the Turkish cruiser Medjidiya, built by the Cramp's yard, when she was delivered to Turkey. Abdul Hamid took a fancy to the sailor and induced him to take a position as naval advisor. He once saved the sultan from assassination.

NEWS EVENTS FOR THE COMING WEEK

Illinois Society of War of 1812 Banquets Thursday—Iroquois Memorial Hospital is Ready—Many Conventions, [SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 24.—Beginning with the celebration of Christmas and ending with the festivities accompanying the birth of the New Year, the week will be truly a holiday period. To a great extent all public and private affairs will be permitted to come to a standstill while the people devote themselves to pleasure.

Many public men of note will attend the banquet of the Illinois Society of the War of 1812, to be held in Chicago, Thursday evening, at which plans for the building of a great memorial for Commander Perry at Put-in-Bay will be discussed.

Football and other branches of college athletics will come up for critical consideration at the fifth annual meeting of the Inter-collegiate Athletic association, which is to be held in New York City, Thursday. The association has a widespread influence in inter-collegiate sport, and has an active membership of sixty-eight leading universities and colleges.

The Iroquois Memorial Emergency hospital, erected in memory of the 600 victims of the Iroquois theatre fire, will be formally turned over to the city of Chicago next Friday, which will be the seventh anniversary of the dreadful holocaust.

The first of the large automobile shows of the season will be opened Saturday in the Grand Central Palace, New York. The exhibition will be that of the so-called independent automobile manufacturers and the announcement is made that it is expected to exceed all of its predecessors in the number and variety of its exhibits.

The annual meetings of many educational associations and learned societies will be held during the week. Among the meetings of general interest will be those of the Southern Educational Association at Chattanooga, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, at Milwaukee, the American Historical Association and allied societies, at Indianapolis, the American Philosophical association, at Princeton university, the Archaeological Institute of America, and the American Philological society, at Brown university, and the Society of American Bacteriologists, at Cornell university.

GEORGE OF GREECE DISCOUNTS FUTURE

Wise Monarch Buys Estates and Invests Outside Kingdom Against the Day When He Must Quit Throne.

Copenhagen, Dec. 24.—King George, the former Danish prince who has surprised everyone by sitting fast on the wobbly throne of Greece these forty-seven years past, came nearer to being born on Christmas Day than any other of the sovereigns of Europe. December 24, 1845, is generally accepted as the date of his birth, but the records of the royal family of Denmark show that the hour of his advent into this mundane sphere was almost simultaneous with the birth of Christmas Day in 1845 and the late King Christian and Queen Louise were often heard to refer to him as their Christmas present.

King George apparently has never forgotten the days of his youth, when his parents, who had not yet been called to the Danish throne, were notoriously poor. At sixty-five years of age the King of Greece finds himself among the very wealthiest members of European royalty. His reputation for thrift is such, in fact, that it has been said he still has the first money which came to him after his succession to the throne of Greece in 1863. However this may be, it is certain that he has managed to save a tidy sum each year out of his civil list. Much of his savings has been safely invested in reality, while the remainder has been used by the monarch in speculating on the Paris Bourse, in which he has been evidently successful. In recent years he has invested large sums in American securities.

It is an open secret that King George, were it not for consideration of the members of his family, would welcome a political upheaval in Greece as recently deprived the young king of Portugal of his throne. Many times during the last quarter of a century the king of the Hellenes has been reported on the point of abdicating. That he undoubtedly expects such an event to occur sooner or later is evidenced by the careful preparations he has made for the future, invested outside of Greece, and only within the past month or so he has concluded the purchase of two magnificent estates in Denmark, evidently to be used for his own residence when the time comes for him to finally quit Athens.

MEXICAN REBELLION IS NOT OVER; MUCH FIGHTING DAILY

H. H. Fries Formerly Connected With the Gazette Writes of the Troubles Having Acted As War Correspondent For El Paso Herald.

Despite official reports from the City of Mexico and from the authorities of the sister republic, the fighting of the insurrectionists is not by any means over and battles are being fought daily in the mountains in Chihuahua Province, H. H. Fries who was connected with the circulation department of the Gazette for several years and more recently with the El Paso Herald, writes under the date of December 21, that he has just returned from the interior of Mexico, where he has been acting as a war correspondent for the Herald and that there is plenty of fighting. According to Mr. Fries the insurgents have thus far had the best of it. They have made a gallant fight and held off the government troops sent against them killing, wounding and capturing a good portion of the active army.

American newspaper men are not welcomed by the Mexican authorities and Mr. Fries returned to the States after having been warned to do so if he did not wish to be shot. The idea appears to be that the rebellion will be crushed out ultimately owing to the extra forces that the government are pouring into that province from the south, but in Mr. Fries' opinion this will not be for at least two months. Mr. Fries has been in the city of Chihuahua and reports that Mrs. MacLean and her daughters are in no danger and that their friends and relatives in Janesville need not worry.

He enclosed a picture of Mexican Rebels starting for the front, and stated that over a hundred soldiers had been killed and seventy-two wounded on the day he made the card, December 19. This was mailed in Chihuahua and did not reach Janesville any quicker than the letter mailed two days later in El Paso, where Mr. Fries is now, having taken the friendly advice to leave the reporting of the Mexican war to the Mexican government.

SEVENTEEN GUESTS AT HOTEL SCHEIBEL

Will Enjoy Hospitality of the Sheriff at Christmas Dinner on Christmas Day.

Sheriff R. G. Scheibel will entertain seventeen guests from various parts of the country at Christmas dinner tomorrow. The guests, involuntary, are the same who have been enjoying the board furnished by the sheriff for the past few days or late arriving today, in observance of the day especial arrangements have been made for the feast. Chechen will be the chief article on the menu with dressing and other Christmas trimmings, a repast that many of the guests would doubtless have gone without but for the invitation given them by the police courts to spend at least a part of the holidays with the sheriff. It has been the usual custom to serve turkey to the prisoners, but the sheriff feels that a change will serve to stimulate their appetites, turkey, at the prevailing prices being too cheap fare to serve such distinguished persons.

MADE FLYING VISIT ON WAY TO CHICAGO

Harry McClure Greeted Friends In City—Has Important Position on Omaha Road.

Harry McClure was in Janesville last evening for a few hours enroute to Chicago to spend Christmas. Mr. McClure took charge of the dining, cafe and buffet cars of the Omaha system of the Northwestern railroad on Monday last, with headquarters in Minneapolis. He has under his direct charge sixteen cars and some two hundred men. His cars run as far south as Elroy, to Duluth and Omaha. His headquarters will be in Minneapolis and he will move thereto after the first of the year from Chicago, his present home. The new position that he has assumed is one of the responsible ones in the Northwestern dining car system and will be almost doubled within the next year or two according to present plans of the officials of the road.

Lacked Atmosphere.

"I did hope for an artistic career," said the disappointed looking man, "but I met with difficulties I could not conquer. What I needed was atmosphere." "I see; the same old trouble. What were you—an author or a painter?" "Neither. I was learning to play the trombone, but I was naturally short of breath."

EXTRA COPIES OF THE

SANTA CLAUS LETTERS

Should Be Ordered by Phone or in Person at the Gazette Office.

Extra copies of the Gazette containing the children's letters to Santa Claus can be ordered by phone or in person, but should be looked after at once, the price being three cents per copy. More of these little folks' letters were received this year than ever before and many of the communications are pathetic in that some of the little tots will need the assistance of a material Santa Claus to fulfill their wishes.

SANTA AND THE LITTLE MOUSE.

By FRANCIS TAYLOR.
(Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.)

One Christmas eve when Santa Claus came to a certain house to fill the children's stockings there he found a little mouse.

"A merry Christmas, little friend," said Santa, good and kind. "The same to you, sir," said the mouse.

"I thought you wouldn't mind

"If I should stay awake tonight And watch you for awhile."

"You're very welcome, little mouse," said Santa, with a smile.

And then he filled the stockings up Before the mouse could wink—

From toe to top, from top to toe, There wasn't left a chink.

"Now, they won't hold another thing," said Santa Claus, with pride.

A twinkle came in mouse's eyes,

But humbly he replied:

"It's not polite to contradict Your pardon I implore.

But in the fullest stocking there I could put one thing more."

"Oh, ho," laughed Santa, "silently mouse!

Don't I know how to pack?

By filling stockings all these years I should have learned the knack."

And then he took the stocking down From where it hung so high

And said: "Now put in one thing more,

I give you leave to try."

The mouse chuckled to himself,

And then he softly stole,

Right to the stocking's crowded toe

And gnawed a little hole.

"Now, if you please, good Santa Claus,

I've put in one thing more,

For you will own that little hole Was not in there before."

How Santa Claus did laugh and laugh!

And then he gayly spoke,

"Well, you shall have a Christmas cheese

For that nice little joke."

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

MINE hostess came back from a five-minute conversation at the telephone, pouting churlishly. "Such a bore to have to stay so long at that old telephone when I didn't want to lose a moment of you," she assured me.

Most chattering, surely, BUT—

Well, I shall never telephone that lady again without wondering what comment follows the end of our talk.

Would you?

How people dare say things that when they must know how they will be translated by people of discernment, I just can't see.

Who but a fool, after hearing a woman criticize everything about the member of the group who has just left, would not realize that the moment she herself got out of earshot, the same fine-tooth criticism would be applied to her?

There was a girl at college who was tremendously clever at making fun of people. She was so irresistibly witty that when she got started on one of her tirades, we all laughed, even when we were ashamed of laughing. She was an interesting girl, a brilliant girl, a jolly girl in many ways, but she didn't have many friends.

Why?

Why, because even when we laughed and applauded, we trembled for our own skins. We knew enough to be afraid of her.

Everyone knows the type of girl who tells you, with a delightfully confidential air, "She told me not to tell anyone this but I simply must tell YOU about it, because I know you will appreciate it."

A few—a very few of us—have the strength not to listen to her violated confidences, but the majority of us listen, laugh, or are interested, thank our stars, and straightway set her down as someone whose pledged word we must remember to have no confidence in.

To me, the worst type of these folks who so cheerfully make the noise wherewith to murder people's trust in them, is the man who talks about other women he has known to the one woman with whom he happens to be in love at the moment.

He, doubtless, thinks to make himself solid with the new love by betraying the old, but if the new love is any kind of a woman at all, he damns himself utterly as a person to be trusted.

It is a poor rule that doesn't work both ways, and what anyone, in the excitement of a confidential or affectionate or friendly moment, will say to you about another person, it's dollars to doughnuts that under similar conditions he will say to someone else about you.

Of course there are a few exceptions to this as to all rules.

But on the whole I think it's a pretty safe rule to go by, and that anyone of sense, whatever his outward demeanor towards such people, always monetarily hangs a "Beware of the dog" sign upon them.

The KITCHEN CABINET

THE pleat of trades have their moments of pleasure. Now, if I were a gravedigger or even a hangman, there are some people I could work for with a great deal of enjoyment.

Candy for the Children.

All children love to make candy and many never outgrow the habit. Any girl may learn how to make several kinds and in that way help out in the holiday preparations. Home-made candy is much more wholesome than much that is bought and is very much cheaper, which is an important item in most homes.

Nut Candy.—This is a delicious candy which may be made with any kind of nuts. Peanuts are especially good. Shell and remove the brown skins from a quart of peanuts. Roll them with a rolling pin until well broken, but not too fine. Put over the fire to cook; a pound of light brown sugar and six ounces of butter. Cook just ten minutes from the time it commences to bubble, stirring constantly to keep any part from scorching. Add the peanuts and pour into a buttered pan to cool. Mark in squares before it gets too hard. Every thing must be in readiness when making candy, for sometimes a half a minute will ruin all the work. This candy will delight young and old, for it is not hard and brittle, but "nice and chewy," as the children say.

Maple Fudge.—For delicious maple fudge, take one and a half cupsful of light brown sugar, one cupful of maple syrup, half a cup of milk, and a tablespoonful of butter. Boil slowly until it makes a ball when rolled between the fingers, after dropping a little in cold water. Let stand to cool, then beat until creamy; put into a buttered pan quickly, mark off into squares and when cold it is ready to eat. Dates stuffed with nuts are a nice variety for the little candy maker to prepare. They may be stuffed with some of the fudge or cream candy that is too rough to make in nice shape.

Salted Nuts.—Put almonds after shelling into a sauce pan and boil one minute, then plunge into cold water and slip off the skins. This is blanching them. To salt, put a cup of almonds in a pan with a teaspoonful of olive oil or butter, stir until a rich brown, sprinkle with salt and cool.

FINISH EVERY DAY. Dear old Dr. Emerson, writing a philosphy that should be an inspiration to men for generations after he had gone the way of all earth, said: "Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities, no doubt, crept in; forget them as soon as you can." Make every day as complete in itself as if you expected it to be your last and wanted your record as a man or a woman to stand upon it. The life lived along that line will rarely fail to be a happy and comfortable one. It has its compensation in the knowledge that each sunlit thud its work completed.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

WAIT FOR YOUR CUE.

A St. Louis girl of unknown wrote a brief note, closed down the windows and turned on the gas. The note read:

"I am sick and tired and out of money. There is no hope. Goodby." The poor lass evidently believed self destruction would be the door of escape from all her troubles.

But would it?

If you should be miserable and unhappy in some country in the state of Indiana would you become contented and happy merely by moving over into some county in Illinois?

Death is only a change of venue. "Which way I turn is hell," says Milton's Satan. "Myself am hell." That's it. You carry the wretchedness in yourself, and no shifting of the scenery will suffice.

What a pity this poor child in St. Louis, driven to despair, did not have some one near to say—

"Now, my dear, it matters not how badly off you may be, you ought to know that many other persons who are now fairly prosperous and contented have passed through just such experience as yours."

No matter how dark your day, the clouds will brighten by and by. Wait.

Do nothing rash.

"If you are really hungry there are many places like the Humane society or the Associated Charities or the Salvation Army where they will give you food and welcome. Nay, they will put a roof over your head if need be and give you a chance to look around and gather fresh courage."

"If you are really sleek there are the free hospitals and dispensaries which you may patronize without losing your self respect."

"The chances are you are not ill. You are simply worn of body and faint of heart. Wait. Rest a bit. Take a full breath or two and make a new start."

But, also—

"The girl was alone, driven to bay, desperate. In her moment of hopelessness it seemed good to destroy her body to ease her mind."

And pity 'tis she is only one of thousands such.

"Sudden is confession."

"It is so if the actor should rush from behind the scenes and plunge into the limelight before his call. How will he explain his presence there? And what must be his confusion?"

Should he not expect to be hissed from the stage and put to further embarrassment?

It is better to wait for the call and get one's cue before coming on.

It is time enough to be called, trembling, hesitant, to say one's lines when his turn comes.

Used Teeth to Inflict Punishment.

"There has been disturbance at Chusan," says the North China Daily News. "The mandarin tried to force the soldiers to take their pay in big cash. The soldiers rebelled and, aided by their wives, nearly bit the officer to death. It appears there is no punishment for biting, so they took this method of inflicting punishment on the mandarin; had they beaten or struck the officer they would have been subject to punishment by the government."

An Ancient Anesthetic.

A Chinese manuscript lately discovered proves that anesthetics were used in China seventeen hundred years ago. A certain concoction, it states, was given by the doctors before performing an operation, which rendered the patient unconscious. The anesthetic was a simple preparation of hemp.

The aeroplane is an airboat rather than flying machine, says St. Nicholas. The only action of the bird that it imitates is the bird's soaring, in nearly the same sense in which a boat floats or a duck swims. With the duck, however, there is one difference. It shares the balloon principle. Because its body will not sink when it stands still, whereas the aeroplane will fall unless it is constantly urged forward. The duck is lighter than its bulk of water, as the balloon is lighter than its own bulk of air. To call an aeroplane a flying machine is therefore exactly the same as to call a boat a swimming machine (keeping in mind the swimming of the duck and neglecting that of fishes and of human beings).

Lord Loveland Discovers America

By C. N. AND A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright 1910, by Doubleday, Page & Company. Copyright 1914, by the McClure Company.

"Oh, because I'm a woman myself?" And then she would say no more on that subject, but she talked eagerly of Bill Willing and his star.

Sidney Cremer would play fancy godfather to the two, she said, speaking with that happy certainty of her lover's mind which invariably depressed and irritated Loveland.

There were numerous country companions "on the road" touring with Sidney's pieces in very good towns. Sidney may talk.

"Mr. Gordon's" word for Little de Lisie's ability as a soprano and would offer her part shortly to be open owing to the marriage of the girl now playing it. As for "that perfect lamb of a Bill," a place should be found for him in the same company that Lesley would promise—and they could marry at once.

"You had better wait and hear what Mr. Cremer says," suggested Loveland, almost bitterly, when Lesley had instructed him to write the good news at once to Little and Bill. Ed Blinney was also to be provided for, sent to a convalescent home and given hope for a chance as "property man" with one of Sidney's plays when he should be strong enough to go on tour again.

"Oh, Sidney and I always think alike. Haven't I told you that before?" was Lesley's answer. "There's no need to wait. I know all about Sidney's business. And I thought it would be a pleasure to you to write and let me know of making your friends happy."

"So it would if I were the means," muttered Loveland. "But I'm not. It's Mr. Sidney Cremer. Everything is Sidney Cremer, and he is everything."

"Some day I may remind you of that speech," said Lesley. Then she laughed in a mysterious little way she had. But she was determined that Loveland should write the letters she desired written, and, learning the lesson of unselfishness, he tried to rejoice in his friend's good luck.

"It's a long line that has no turning," he said to himself as he sealed letters which would change the face of the world for three persons. "Their turning has come at last, and I'm glad. But my line is blocked. Whatever happens, that brute Sidney Cremer will always stand at the end and bar my way out."

CHAPTER XXVI.

IN THE CAR TOOTHACHE.

IT was the day after Val had sent off the joyous tidings to his friends in the big world beyond that Loveland had those from the big world came to him.

Thanks to Miss Moon, the letters from home were lost, but, greatly as that lady would have delighted in sweeping a measure, it was impossible to keep P. Gordon forever in the dark by destroying whole issues of New York journals.

Uncle Wally was in the habit of bringing the gentleman chauffeur his breakfast and with that meal, which consisted of delicious southern dishes, the morning paper.

Loveland did not find American news particularly exciting and as a rule merely glanced through the paper as he ate. But the New York Light had a special interest for him.

Val laid aside the Louisville Monday paper and began to read the New York Light.

Suddenly he cried out an excited "Yay!" and forgot that he had not finished his breakfast, but as by this time Uncle Wally had gone there was nobody to be surprised by his emotion.

Yes, it had come at last, his justification, and even his triumph for the story as told by Tony Kidd made it seem almost a triumph. Indeed, he had hardly realized himself how dramatic it all was until he saw the printed account of what he had gone through. Bill Willing had been interviewed at the Bat hotel, of which a graphic sketch and description were given. Alexander the Great had been interviewed and thus secured another free advertisement for the red restaurant. Loveland had been interviewed and photographed in her best hat. And last, though far from least, Mr. Henry van Cott had been interviewed. From him, it seemed, Tony Kidd had got on the trail of the truth.

Mr. van Cott's friend Jim Harborough had wired from London that it was all a mistake about the valet impersonating the Marquis of Loveland, a mistake which had partly arisen through the sailing of Lord Loveland on the Mauretania instead of the Baltic, as expected. The valet had sailed for Australia, but would be arrested at the first port, and it was the Marquis of Loveland himself whom fate and society had hounded out of New York.

"Where Is Lord Loveland?" was one of the several sensational headlines with which Tony had ornamented his two column article, far, though Bill Willing had told of the barnstorming episode, he did not yet know and therefore could not tell, even if he would, his "swell" friend's present address.

Now that he had come into his own Loveland could no doubt somehow get money almost at once on that unlucky letter of credit, pay back the advance Miss Dearmer had made him, cease to be a gentleman chauffeur, leave the Hill Farm and return to New York to be a gentleman at large.

But there was no joy in the thought of ceasing to be a chauffeur and still less in that of leaving the Hill Farm.

The play was played out, and the adventure was over, but life could not be as it had been for Loveland. He could not take up the old life or the old self where he had dropped both one night in Central Park. He was a different man in these days, caring for different things, and unfortunately the thing he cared for most was the one thing he could not have—Lesley Dearmer's love. Being once more Lord Loveland and having a repentant New York at his feet would not give him Lesley Dearmer. While he was thinking how good it would have been were fate a better stage manager to justify himself to Lesley, Lesley sent for him by Uncle Wally.

Then he was still the chauffeur, and the darky who politely delivered the message announced that "young miss would be obliged to Missus Gordon if he would take her out in the car as quick as possible."

As Loveland looked over the Gloria, making her purr pleasantly in preparation for the run, he tried to decide definitely what to do next. Face to face with the certainty of separation and her marriage with another man, every hour spent with the loved one became a priceless treasure. He resolved not only to be silent about the article in the New York Light, but to go back to his room and carefully hide the news-paper.

Thus he did, delighted to find the big budget lying on the floor where he had left it.

When Cremer was in the house he would be glad to go and glad to prove to Lesley before going that he was all he had once claimed to be.

When the car was ready he drove to the front door and found Lesley tying on her motor veil, a charming picture set in a rustic frame.

Loveland's spirits rose when he saw that she was alone. Auntie in the Illinois was the least obtrusive of chaperones. Still, there was joy in having the girl to himself.

"For a wonder I couldn't sleep last night," said Lesley, "and I thought an early spin in the car would clear my brain of cobwebs."

Loveland said he was sorry to hear Miss Dearmer had not slept. "Uncle Wally told me," he added, "that you'd been writing late last night."

"Not exactly writing," explained Lesley, finishing the chiffon bow under her chin with dainty elaboration. "I was looking over an act of a new play which Sidney has begun. Perhaps that excited me. And then I was waked at 7 by a telegram and could not sleep again."

Something in her eyes, gleaming like fairy jewels under an enchanted lake as they shone through the filmy veil, made Val miserably sure that Cremer had sent the telegram.

But he was becoming outwardly quite well trained servant, and only under the greatest provocation could he be goaded into asking impudent questions.

"You've heard nothing from your people yet?" asked Lesley after a few minutes' silence while they flew along a road smooth as if it had been made for generations.

"Not yet," replied Val. "But I dare say something will be forwarded from Homerton theater in a day or two. I told you I'd written to the manager there, giving this address, for Bill would have sent on to Homerton anything that came for me to his care in New York."

"Yes, you told me," said Lesley. "But I was wondering if you'd had good news, because—"

"Because of something in your telegram?" Loveland could not resist breaking into the slight pause she made.

"Yes, indirectly. Dear me, Mr. Gordon, don't you think you went round that corner too fast?"

"Did I?" asked Loveland. "I'm sorry, I didn't notice."

"What an alarming confession from one's chauffeur! Oh, and that chicken—when nearly ran over it! I believe your nerves must be a little 'jumpy' too. I think I could drive almost as well as myself that myself."

"I deserve to be scolded," said Loveland. "I'm afraid I was absent-minded for an instant, though the chicken didn't seem worried about itself."

"Kentucky chickens never are. They're so high spirited. Take care of that baby pig, Mr. Gordon! I think I will drive for awhile after all, if you don't mind."

"Delighted," said Loveland in a mood to rejoice if the girl upset the car and killed them both, because it would be so much more agreeable to go out of the world with her than to remain in it while she became lost to him as Mrs. Cremer.

She began cautiously, but in a few moments put the forty horsepower Gloria on fourth speed, throttling her down to a pace within reason.

"There! Aren't you proud of your pupil?" the girl asked gaily.

"Very proud," answered Loveland.

"And do you think I should be able to get on without much more teaching from a real expert?"

"Oh, yes. With a decent sort of chauffeur to do your repairs you can drive the car through country like this without danger!"

"Unless I get absentminded."

"Yes, unless you get absentminded. But why should you be absentminded when so soon you'll have the person you care for most sitting beside you where I sit now? Oh, I ought to beg your pardon for saying such things. Miss Dearmer, but, you see, you and I were once friends, not employer and servant, so I forget myself sometimes. And, besides, I can't help thinking this morning that you're leading up to saying something which perhaps you find it little difficult to say. Yet why should it be difficult for you to tell me if you've heard that Mr. Cremer is coming at once and bringing another chauffeur?"

"My telegram didn't say that, but it made me feel that I shan't be able to keep you very long at the Hill Farm," said Lesley.

Gone was the elaborate scheme for staying on at any cost. She wanted him to go. She was hinting for him to go.

"I can leave whenever you like to get rid of me," returned Val, his tone roughened, made almost brutal, by his effort to hide the sharp pain he suffered.

"Oh, don't think I feel like that!" exclaimed Lesley eagerly—so eagerly that in her excitement she did the very thing she had reproached Loveland for doing. She forgot that a person controlling a powerful motorcar is ill-advised to be in earnest about anything except the business in hand.

They were approaching a somewhat abrupt turn in the road at the moment Lesley chose to assure Loveland that she didn't mean to hurt his feelings. Being genuinely sorry for the effect her words produced, she did not realize until too late that the corner would expect her to slow down before turning it. She tried to make up for her mistake by a furtive glance steering, but the task was beyond her powers. The big Gloria swayed round the curve on two wheels, refused to take the new direction and bounded gayly off the road, across a ditch and into a meadow.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE MOON.

THE next thing that Loveland knew he was sitting in a bog, which felt quite soft and comfortable—so comfortable that he at first believed himself to be in bed, walking out of a bad dream. Then with a flush he remembered all that had happened and scrambled up in a cold sweat of fear for Lesley.

A curtain of sparks which showed before his eyes dimmed his sight at first, but in a moment he saw a slight gray clad figure lying on the ground not far away.

"Lesley!" he cried. "Lesley!"

But she neither stirred nor answered.

Down he dropped on both knees beside her and raised her upon his arm. Her eyes were closed, and through the chiffon veil he could see the long lashes dark on the paler of her cheeks.

ECZEMA TOTALLY COVERED HIS FACE

When a Baby—Hair All Came Out—Always Scratching—Mother Got Cuticura and He was Cured After 3 Years of Disease.

"My son was about four months old when he was taken with dreadful eczema. I had four different doctors but they could not help him. The hair all came out and his face was totally covered. His eyes were shut and we thought he would go blind. His limbs and body were also affected. He was always scratching. I had to stop him from scratching and he would not listen. We did not know what to do. I used to get sick handling him, from the way the corruption was always running. But I got some Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and in a week or ten days I could see the corruption drying up and before long he was cured, after about three years of the terrible disease. Now he is nineteen years old and has not a sign of the old trouble. You see I learned to save three-quarters of the doctor bills by the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and I will recommend either to any one and advise them to use them and receive a safe speedy cure." Mrs. Catherine Mocklin, Deck St., Royalton, Pa., Feb. 21, 1910.

Cuticura is the most economical treatment for torturing, disfiguring afflictions of the skin of infants, children and adults. A single cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient.

Cuticura Soap (25c), Ointment (50c), Treatment (50c), and Chocolate Coated Pills (25c), are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Suite 137 Columbus Ave., Boston.
